At Compare Holiday Money, we compare the euro rates from dozens of top UK foreign exchange providers to help you find the most competitive currency deals online and on the high street. We continuously scan and track the latest euro rates from a wide range of currency providers to help you find the companies offering the best deals. Our clever currency comparisons automatically factor in all costs and charges like delivery fees and commission, so all you need to do is tell us how much you want to spend and we'll show you the best euro rates available to buy online right now. What is the best euro exchange rate right now? The best euro exchange rate right now is 1.1373 from Travel FX. This is based on a comparison of 17 currency suppliers and assumes you were buying £750 worth of euros for home delivery. Remember, exchange rates aren't the only important factor when finding the best euro deal. Delivery costs, commission and payment surcharges can all affect the amount of money you'll receive. See our comprehensive euro travel money comparisons to find the absolute best deal with all costs and charges factored in. Where can I get the best euro exchange rate? Online foreign exchange providers who specialise in travel money usually offer the best euro exchange rates, and you'll get the best deals when you buy online for home delivery. If waiting isn't an option, or if you'd rather buy your euros in person, supermarkets typically offer the best euro rates on the high street - but don't just walk in off the street unannounced. Reserve your euros online (ideally the day before you want to collect them) as most supermarkets offer enhanced exchange rates on their website compared to the rates they advertise in store. By ordering online you'll lock-in the better online rate and can collect your euros in person at a time that's convenient for you. Over the past 30 days, the Euro rate is up 0.92% from 1.1373 on 21 Jun to 1.1478 today. This means one pound will buy more Euros today than it would have a month ago. Right now, £750 is worth approximately €860.85 which is €7.87 more than you'd have got on 21 Jun. These are the average Euro rates taken from our panel of UK travel money providers at the end of each day. You can explore this further on our British pound to Euro currency chart. When is the best time to buy euros? Timing is key if you want to maximise your euros, but the best time to buy will depend on the current market conditions and your personal travel plans. If you have a fixed travel date, you should start to monitor the euro rates as soon as possible in the period leading up to your departure so that you've got time to buy when the rate is looking favourable. For example, if the euro rate has been steadily increasing over several weeks or months, it could be a good time to buy while the rate is high. Some people prefer to buy half of their euros as soon as they've booked their holiday, and the remaining half just before they depart. This can be a good way of maximising your holiday money if the exchange rate continues to rise after you've bought, but will also help to minimise your losses if the rate drops. You could also consider signing up to our newsletter and we'll email the latest rates to you each month. If you need your euros sooner and don't have time to wait for the rates to improve, you can still save money by comparing rates from a range of different providers before you buy. Online travel money suppliers usually have better euro rates than high street exchanges, but supermarkets are a good compromise if you want to collect your currency in person and still get a decent rate. Just remember to buy or reserve your euros first before you collect them from the store so you benefit from the supplier's better online rate. Over 340 million people use the euro every day according to the European Central Bank, making it the second most-traded currency in the world after US dollars. Twenty out of 27 EU Member States have adopted the euro as their official currency, and euros are used officially and unofficially in many non-EU countries and territories throughout Europe such as Monaco, San Marino, and Vatican City. Euros are governed and issued by the European Central Bank which is based in Frankfurt, but the actual production of euro banknotes and coins is handled by various national banks throughout the Eurozone. Spain and Greece are responsible for printing €5 and €10 banknotes, Germany prints €100 notes, and the other EU member states are responsible for printing €20 and €50 notes. One euro (€) can be subdivided into 100 cents (c). There are seven denominations of euro banknotes in circulation: €5, €10, €20, €50 and €100 which are frequently used, plus €200 and €500 notes which are no longer printed but are still in circulation and remain legal tender. The designs printed on each banknote are intended to be symbolic of the European Union's identity and unity, as well as highlighting the diversity and richness of different European cultures. The front of each banknote features architectural styles from different periods in Europe's history, including Classical, Gothic, Renaissance and modern, while the reverse side features bridges that represent communication and cooperation between the different countries within the European Union. Euro coins are available in eight denominations: 1c, 2c, 5c, 10c, 20c, 50c, €1 and €2. Each EU member state is responsible for minting its own coins, and can choose their own design for the 'tails' side. For example, German coins feature the 'Bundesadler' or Federal Eagle which has been the German coat of arms since 1950, while French coins depict Marianne, an important symbol of French national identity. Next time you've got a handful of euro coins, take a look at the tails side and see if you can guess which EU country they came from! Which supermarket has the best euro exchange rate? Waitrose has the best Euro rate right now at 1.1319. You'll need to order online to guarantee this rate as rates may be lower in store. You can buy your euros online and collect them from your nearest Waitrose travel money store if you don't want to wait for home delivery. Is it better to buy euros in Europe? There's no evidence to suggest that you'll get a better deal if you buy your euros in Europe. While there may be better exchange rates available in some locations, your options for shopping around may be limited once you arrive, and there's no guarantee the exchange rates will be any better than they are in the UK. Exchange rates aside, here are some other reasons to avoid buying your euros in Europe: You may have to pay commission or other hidden fees to a currency exchange that you wouldn't have paid in the UK Your bank may charge you a foreign transaction fee if you use it to buy euros when you're abroad It can be harder to spot scammers and fraudulent currency exchanges in Europe Lastly, it can be handy to have some cash on you when you arrive at your destination so you can pay for any immediate expenses like food, transport and tips. You don't want to be searching for the nearest currency exchange when you've just landed and you're desperate for a cup of tea - or a cocktail! Which countries use the euro? Twenty out of 27 EU member states have adopted the euro as their official currency. These are: Austria, Belgium, Croatia, Cyprus, Estonia, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Ireland, Italy, Latvia, Lithuania, Luxembourg, Malta, the Netherlands, Portugal, Slovakia, Slovenia and Spain. The following European countries and territories who are not part of the EU also use the euro as their official currency: Andorra, Kosovo, Monaco, Montenegro, San Marino and Vatican City, French Guiana and Martinique, the Azores, Canary Islands, and Madeira. Tips for saving money while visiting Europe The most budget-friendly destinations in Europe are generally those located in the east such as Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia. In contrast, Luxembourg, Ireland and France usually top the list as some of the most expensive holiday destinations. Regardless of where you're planning to visit, you can save money during your trip by following some simple tips: Research your accommodation: Hotels can be expensive, so one way of saving money is to look for more budget-friendly accommodation such as hostels, holiday rentals, or even campsites. AirBnB can be an affordable option too, especially if you rent a room instead of an entire apartment, and you'll get to experience what it's like to live like a local. Salud! Use public transport: Make the most of any metro systems, buses, or trams to get around instead of relying on private taxis or rental cars. Many European countries also offer national and regional travel passes for public transport which can work out significantly cheaper than buying individual tickets. Eat like a local: Opt for local restaurants or street food vendors that offer authentic cuisine at lower prices. Avoid dining at expensive tourist restaurants, and try cooking your own meals if your accommodation has a kitchen. Not only is this a great way to save money, but it can also be a fun cultural experience to shop around in European supermarkets and cook with local ingredients. Plan your itinerary: Look out for free attractions such as museums, parks, churches and historical sites, and plan your itinerary around these. Many cities in Europe also offer free walking tours which can be a great way to get an overview of a new location while learning about its culture and history. Find discount vouchers: Many tourist attractions and activities offer discount vouchers and codes that can save you money on entry fees and other perks. Look for vouchers online; sign up to newsletters and follow the social media accounts of places you're planning to visit. Take cash: Using cash will help you to stick to a budget more easily than paying by card, and you'll also avoid foreign transaction fees. If you do take a card with you, look out for ATMs that are affiliated with your UK bank to avoid ATM fees, and if you're asked whether you want to pay in pounds or euros - always choose euros. If you pay in pounds the merchant can set their own exchange rate which won't be in your favour. © 2025 OANDA Business Information and Services Inc. (trading as OANDA FX Data Services). Skip to main content This static currency converter provides the European Commission's official monthly accounting rate for the euro and the conversion rates as established by the Accounting Officer of the European Commission in line with article 19 of the Financial Regulation. These rates are used to calculate amounts for the reimbursement of expenses, travel or subsistence costs for external people participating in meetings, interviews etc. at the request of the European Commission. The converter also allows general users to get monthly currency conversion rates, from the current month back to 1994. The rates indicated are the market rates for the second to last day of the previous month as quoted by the European Central Bank or, depending on availability, provided by the delegations or other appropriate sources close to that date. InfoEuro provides rates for current and old currencies for countries both inside and outside the European Union. For each currency, the converter provides the historic rates of conversion against the euro (or, until December 1998, against the ecu). These exchange rates are available in electronic format from March 1994 in the form of downloadable files.
