Best financial news app uk.

Keeping up to date with the financial markets is key to becoming a better stock market trader or business leader. With so many to investing apps choose from, finding the best one for you can be tricky. In this article, we'll break down the features of six of the best apps for financial and investing news to help you decide which to use.

6. CNBC The CNBC app brings you all of the latest market news from the American financial news network. The app is simple to use, with articles published several times an hour on earnings reports, economic data, and market movements, with customizable breaking news notifications. If you don't want to get notified of every single new article as it published, read our article on how to set up Notification Summary on your iPhone. The Markets tab offers a quick insight into nearly every market, like forex, crypto, and bonds, not just stocks. Got a few stocks you'd like to keep an eye on? The Watchlist tab lets you do just that, with real-time quotes and company news at your fingertips. If you're a fan of CNBC shows like Mad Money or Squawk Box, you can replay full episodes or watch them live in-app. If you prefer to listen to your financial news, the Listen tab has many daily-updated CNBC podcasts to pick from. Some articles require a CNBC Pro subscription, but most of the articles can be read for free. Download: CNBC for iOS | Android (Free, subscription available) 5. Bloomberg While CNBC is great for keeping up with the latest market news, Bloomberg goes a little bit more in depth into stories, with business and financial news pieces written by award-winning journalists. The app offers a treasure trove of fascinating articles on a wide range of topics, with a Markets tab that offers at-a-glance information on commodity, currency, and equity prices. Any alerts of the latest breaking financial news will appear as notifications on your phone. The Watchlist section functions like CNBC's, but with a twist: you can input your shareholdings for real-time portfolio tracking alongside groundbreaking news. Bloomberg's audio and visual content is held in high regard for its professionalism and standards. You can stream Bloomberg TV and Bloomberg Radio live in the app alongside select clips for expert-level analysis of the markets. Currently, there is a limit on the amount of Bloomberg content you can read, watch, and listen to without a subscription. Download: Bloomberg for iOS | Android (Free, subscription available) 4. The Wall Street Journal Like Bloomberg, the Wall Street Journal (WSJ) is a world-renowned publication with deep-dive articles that provide business leaders across the globe with high-quality journalism. As a traditional paper publication first, WSJ doesn't offer audio or visual content (although you can still listen to articles), but it makes up for this with reliable reporting. Looking for unbiased news sources to get the full picture? Take a look at our article on ways to get balanced and fair news. The app is easy to use, with a scrollable feed sorted by top news followed by various news categories. For news tailored to you, there's a MyWSJ tab for reports tailored to you, which recommends articles based on your browsing. Here, you can also access articles you've saved to read later. The Markets tab isn't as immediately in-depth as CNBC or Bloomberg, but is great for a quick market overview and features a watchlist for your favorite assets. There's also the Notifications tab, where you can quickly turn different alerts on and off with a couple of taps. Overall, the WSJ app doesn't have as many moving parts as others on our list, making it ideal for investors just looking for industry-leading business journalism. While you can browse the app and market data without a subscription, access to articles does require a paid WSJ membership. Download: The Wall Street Journal for iOS | Android (Free, subscription available) 3. Barron's Barron's is owned by the same company as the Wall Street Journal, so you might expect them both to be similar. In fact, they're quite different. While the WSJ app gives more of a broad, top-down overview of the markets and business world, while Barron's is great for the active investor. The Barron's app emphasizes stocks and factors affecting their prices, with multiple articles released every hour. The Home tab immediately brings the day's news to light, with articles on upcoming releases taking center stage. If you want to switch to the latest news, you just need to tap Latest to see a timeline of the most recent news. Barron's weekly magazine is also available for quick browsing in the Magazine tab, with print articles converted to a digital format for easy reading. Perhaps one of the powerful aspects of the app is the Interests tab. This is effectively an extensive categories tab, with 100+ different sections for almost every facet of the financial world. When you tap on an interest, like Trade or Disruption, the Barron's app immediately brings up the latest news about the sector. The Search tab also lets you search for any topic or financial asset, returning the ticker at the top and showing related news articles underneath. While it's free to poke around the app, a subscription is necessary to access articles. Download: Barron's for iOS | Android (Free, subscription available) 2. MarketWatch Unlike the Bloomberg or the Wall Street Journal apps that offer news aimed at financial and business professionals, the MarketWatch app is designed for the average investor on the street. It places more of an emphasis on personal finance and retirement articles, with a section dedicated to learning how to invest in stocks. Nonetheless, MarketWatch offers leading insight into the financial markets, particularly the stock market, with some of the most frequent news updates of any of the apps on our list, occurring every few minutes. Owned by the same company as WSJ and Barron's, it even features some Barron's articles without the need for a subscription. The app itself is lightweight, with three main tabs: Articles, Markets, and Watchlist. The Markets tab offers a quick view of the markets and is quite comprehensive, offering quotes on US, European, and Asian markets, as well as forex and bond markets. By tapping the stack in the top left, there are various news sections for different areas of investing, politics, personal finance, and more, making the MarketWatch app a great all-rounder. The best part is, it's completely free! No subscription is required to make full use of the app. Download: MarketWatch for iOS | Android (Free) 1. SeekingAlpha SeekingAlpha is a little different from the other apps featured on this list. While the other apps are produced by large media companies, SeekingAlpha takes more of a crowd-sourced approach. It has its own reporting team but also features "ideas" from contributors that you can follow. The app is relatively complex, so it may not suit new investors. But, if you've been in the stock market for a while, SeekingAlpha can be a powerful assistant. It offers reporting on the latest market movers, with a wide range of categories to choose from. If you've got a portfolio you'd like to keep an eye on, the Portfolio tab lets you add your stocks or link a brokerage account for instant syncing. The data it gives for each stock is more comprehensive than the others on our list, with data on stock ratings, growth, and performance at your fingertips. The Ideas tab is what sets SeekingAlpha apart, however. Individual contributors post their analysis breakdowns, giving you an in-depth look into their reasoning and ideas for how to trade a particular stock. If you like an author's posts, you can follow them and see their posts in a streamlined feed. The other apps on our list are great for objective reporting on the financial world, but SeekingAlpha might be the app for you if you're looking for a fresh perspective on the markets. However, a new perspective comes at a cost, as you'll need a SeekingAlpha subscription to continue using the app and read unlimited articles. Download: SeekingAlpha for iOS | Android (Free, subscription available) If you're into sports, you know how vital it is to stay on top of the latest news; missing a day or two of action can set you back and make it hard to follow what's happening. The financial world is no different. With the apps we've listed, you can now easily follow the latest business and investing news. Each app offers a comprehensive suite of features that every investor will find value in, no matter their experience in the financial markets. Timing is everything, and missing a major development in the market or a stock can cost you dearly. To remain up-to-date on stock and financial news, consider these apps to make the most of your time. If you uncover a trend not yet seen by the market, this could lead to capturing alpha and delivering yourself superior returns. To keep yourself up-to-date with the stock market and financial news, as well as increase your chances for capturing alpha, consider downloading some of the best stock and financial news apps available today. Here's our list of the best financial news apps for 2024, ranked by our experts. We'll also provide you with a list of the best financial news apps and software listed below. Some even allow you to trade stocks based on information you read in the news. Best Stock Market and Financial News Sites & Apps - Top Picks Best Stock News Apps & Sites Keep up-to-date with the latest market developments, including stories about stocks you care about. These publications provide in-depth, insightful information about what's happening in the world today and how markets might react going forward. 1. SeekingAlpha Premium App: Best for User-Generated Content & Breaking Stock Market News Available: Sign up here Price: $99/yr billed annually for Premium (or $8.25/mo monthly); $2,399.88/yr billed annually for Pro (or $199.99/mo monthly); contains in-app purchases SeekingAlpha is a financial news app that offers subscribers access to content for free or on a premium basis. The app serves as one of the financial industry's top sources for stock news alerts, crowdsourced investment ideas and community message boards. The service also provides in-depth research on a full range of publicly traded stocks and managed funds. If you subscribe to the service, you can elect to receive stock alerts throughout the day on companies and funds that you want to follow. Motley Fool Rule Breakers: Best for Investing News and Stock Picking Available: Sign up here Price: Discounted rate for first year Motley Fool has established itself as one of the premier stock market websites for stock news, research and analysis services. David Gardner and his team dig deep into individual stocks across the market using historical data, fundamental analysis and market research to uncover selections they believe qualify as the best buys in the stock market right now. This means keeping up-to-date with the latest stock news stories, market developments and financial events for its paying subscribers. A subscription to Motley Fool's Rule Breakers stock picking service includes access to education materials, an active investor community and monthly buy recommendations. Webull tracks thousands of stocks with real-time alerts you can manage in your in-app notification preferences. In addition to this news service, Webull also serves as one of the best stock research and analysis apps because it focuses on traders who utilize technical analysis. This is why I list it as one of the best stock trading apps for beginners. Only invest in "top dog" companies in an emerging industry - As Motley Fool puts it: "It doesn't matter if you're the big player in floppy drives - the industry is falling apart." The company must have a sustainable advantage Company must have strong past price appreciation Company needs to have strong and competent management There must be strong consumer appeal Financial media must overvalue the company As you can see, before recommending a stock to users, Rule Breakers considers a number of factors. In short, the service mainly looks for well-run companies in emerging industries with a sustainable advantage over competitors, among other factors. And their rules seem to pay off if their results have anything to say about it. Over the past 15 years, Rule Breakers has almost doubled the S&P 500, beating many leading money managers on Wall Street. Their results speak for themselves and easily justify the affordable price tag of $99 for the first year. What to Expect from Motley Fool's Rule Breakers: The service includes three primary items you can expect to receive: A listing of Starter Stocks to begin your Rule Breakers journey with their "essential Rule Breakers" 5 "Best Buys Now" opportunities each month Two new stock picks each month You'll receive regular communications from the stock picking service with their stock market news, analysis and rationales for buying stocks meeting their investment criteria. If you're unhappy with the service within the first month, you have a 30-day money back guarantee that allows you to receive a full refund. 3. Motley Fool Stock Advisor: Best for Buy and Hold Investors Available: Sign up here Price: Discounted rate for first year The main difference between Motley Fool's stock picking services is the type of stock pick recommendations. Stock Advisor primarily recommends well-established companies. Over a decade ago, they advised subscribers to buy companies such as Netflix and Disney, which have been majority successful. Both provide stock market news, research and financial analysis as well as commentary on the market. As a subscriber to Motley Fool Stock Advisor, you're granted access to their history of stock market recommendations and can see for yourself how they have done over the years. According to their website, the Motley Fool Stock Advisor stock subscription service has done three times better than the S&P 500 over the last 17 years. The Motley Fool Stock Advisor track record of stock picks has done well for buy and hold investors. How Has Motley Fool's Stock Advisor Performed? As a subscriber, you're granted access to their history of recommendations and can see for yourself how they have done over the years. According to their website, the Motley Fool Stock Advisor stock subscription service has returned of 404% when you calculate the average return of all their stock recommendations over the last 17 years. Comparatively, the S&P 500 only had a 135% return during that same timeframe. What to Expect from Motley Fool's Stock Advisor: The Stock Advisor service provides a lot of worthwhile resources to subscribers. "Starter Stocks" recommendations to serve as a foundation for your portfolio for new and experienced investors Two new stock picks each month 10 "Best Buys Now" chosen from over 300 stocks the service watches Investing resources with the stock picking service's library of stock recommendations Access to community of investors engaged in outperforming the market and talking shop The service has a discounted rate for your first year and has a 30-day membership refund period. Consider signing up for Stock Advisor today. 4. Robinhood Available: Sign up here Price: $0 trades The Robinhood app, in addition to helping you become more financially literate, is an exchange where you can buy and sell stocks, cryptocurrency, index funds and ETFs. The app also provides a news stream service within the app, pulling from multiple major financial news outlets. A major selling point of the app is that it's completely free to use. Robinhood has research tools such as market data, news, and analysis. The information on Robinhood may not be as comprehensive as other apps, but it makes up for that by being very user-friendly and straightforward to use. It's a useful app for beginners. If you want an app that both educates you and allows you to trade on it, Robinhood is a great option. If you want to see a larger universe of investment apps, you may want to explore the several apps like Robinhood available to investors. 5. Trade Ideas: Best for Daily Trading Ideas & Proprietary Idea Filter Tools Available: Sign up here Best for: Day traders and long-term investors Price: Trade of the Week Newsletter: Free; $1,999/year; $167/mo for Premium; $999/year; $83/mo for Standard Trade Ideas employs an artificial intelligence-powered assistant named Holly. This AI becomes your virtual investment research analyst who never sleeps and instead sifts through technicals, fundamentals, social media, earnings and more to pick stocks as real-time trade recommendations. Holly stays busy, too. She runs over 1 million simulated trades each night and morning before the markets open with more than 70 proprietary algorithms to find you the highest probability, risk appropriate opportunities to invest in stocks. Trade Ideas doesn't stop there, though. You can use these trade ideas proposed in real-time through a live simulated trading room. This allows you to demo the stock picking service's ideas without risking your own money. The powerful service allows you to access real-time streaming trading ideas on appropriate charts to learn how to trade into risk-reward balanced trades. You can invest and learn at the same time. Where Trade Ideas Excels Where Trade Ideas excels is not only giving you the data and ideas you haven't seen elsewhere through its premium features, but also how to manage your money. The rules-based virtual trading room on every chart plays for both long-term investors as well as active traders for guiding their investment decisions. As the market evolves, Trade Ideas' software adjusts levels and the trading plan to match. The best part? You can learn how to do all of this without risking your principal through a real-time simulated trading environment. After you've grown comfortable with the service, you can choose to go live with the trade ideas and start investing real money by connecting directly through linked brokers like Interactive Brokers, TD Ameritrade and E-Trade. Additionally, the service provides alerting services. You can receive price alerts through their Standard and Premium services as well as by subscribing to the company's ALERT index newsletter. This gives you 5 new trade ideas in your inbox from the company's model portfolio every Sunday night. They also offer a free features through their Trade of the Week newsletter highlighting a stock pick they have identified for subscribers. How Does Trade Ideas Find Stock Picks? Trade Ideas' technology uses a different scan each week to find unusual trade activity. For example, they may detect a high short interest % in a stock or industry, which often leads to short squeezes, such as what happened with GameStop. Real people curate scan results before any recommendations come available through the service. You'll also learn how the service picked the trade, why they believe it will perform well and how to find similar trades on your own. The service carries a hefty price tag with plans starting at $999 per year for the Standard subscription. For the full Holly experience, you'll need to upgrade to their $1,999 Premium plan. Though, for these prices, you get access to what is likely the best day trading stock picking service on the market. If you've got a lot of capital you plan to place at risk, this investment is a no-brainer. Consider starting your Trade Ideas subscription with no contract involved. Cancel anytime. 6. Finimize: Best for Daily Digests of Stock Market News Available: Sign up here Price: Daily Brief is Free; Premium costs $40 annually through link above Finimize keeps its Daily Brief newsletter emails short (usually fewer than 500 words) and engaging. The service breaks them up into three sections of "What's going on?" "What does this mean?" "Why should I care?" It uses a casual, humorous tone to summarize recent financial news and links to further reading material. Finimize doesn't directly tell you buy or avoid, but rather gives you information to make your own decisions. Subscribers receive an email each weekday for free. If you like Finimize's style, you may choose to sign up for their premium services, such as recorded audio of their content, meetups, and more detailed reporting. Premium services normally cost $79.99 annually after a weeklong free trial. However, by using this link, you can receive 50% off your annual premium subscription. 7. Tokenist's Five Minute Finance - Best for Quick Macro Trend Discussion Available: Sign up here Price: Free Five Minute Finance (GMF) one of those newsletters that's read by every type of investor out there. Here's the newsletter in summary: It's free Published weekly, every Friday Focuses on identifying the five most significant trends of the week—keeping investors up to speed on all things finance If you want to stay in the know and have a general pulse on the bigger picture of financial markets, then Five Minute Finance is exactly what you're looking for. This newsletter focuses on explaining the macro trends and their impact on financial markets. It also pays close attention to the integration of finance and technology, including fintech, cryptocurrency, digital assets, DeFi, and NFTs. But instead of just giving you headlines, there's actual analysis involved as well—making the most significant events to impact financial markets understandable by all investors. Here's a sample of the topics covered: In today's macroeconomic environment—with the Federal Reserve battling inflation, various global supply chain disruptions, and the ramifications of Russia's invasion of Ukraine—Five Minute Finance is a no-brainer, especially for the price: free. 8. CNBC App: Best for Stock Market News and Personal Finance Topics Available: Play Store, iOS Price: Free; contains ads NBC's flagship financial news app provides users with market data, financial information, and international business news. You can access real-time stock quotes, look at interactive charts and even see stock futures information to get a sense for where the market may head. This app lets you customize a watch list to track specific stocks that interest you. If you choose, you can have breaking news updates pushed through even while the app is closed, so you never miss time-sensitive financial information. As a bonus, you can watch full episodes of CNBC shows, such as "American Greed" and "Mad Money with Jim Cramer" to keep yourself financially motivated. 9. Webull: Go to Resource for Technical Aspects and Free Trading Available: Sign up here Price: $0 trades, $0 account minimums; Free stocks w/$100 deposit Webull is the latest free stock trading app on the market which charges no commissions for trades. The service provides a significant level of financial tools for conducting in-depth analysis but also comes paired with a news aggregator service for quickly following market developments. Webull tracks thousands of stocks with real-time alerts you can manage in your in-app notification preferences. In addition to this news service, Webull also serves as one of the best stock research and analysis apps because it focuses on traders who utilize technical analysis. This is why I list it as one of the best stock trading apps for beginners. In fact, Webull not only offers commission-free trading, free news stories and an active investor community, it also offers a significant amount of technical research resources for individuals looking to invest in stocks, bonds, options and cryptocurrencies. Further, it acts as a great stock tracking app with alerts, notifications and charting. Further, Webull provides a free 3-month trial of NASDAQ TotalView Level 2 Advance quotes, which provides real-time views into the depth-of-market in a security. This gives a sense of market depth and trading activity After 3 months, you can subscribe to the service for a monthly fee of $1.99/mo. The app provides useful tools, access to financial news stories and any summary-level research activity published by Wall Street analysts. As a bonus for opening your account, if you deposit $100 or more you can also earn free stocks. 10. Scanz (formerly EquityFeed Workstation) Scanz caters to traders and not investors. As a result, the service targets tickers and not companies. That means your goal is to find good trading opportunities each day and profit from them. To do this, you need to scan thousands of tickers regularly and keep up-to-date with the latest stock market news. The service offers long or short stock tracking options for price-based, volume-based or news-based trades. You can subscribe to the Streaming News module only if this is all you need. You can also add on the Pro Scanner module or bundle them. If you choose to subscribe to the bundled service in addition to the stock news module, the most acclaimed feature of Scanz (formerly EquityFeed Workstation) is the "FilterBuilder." With this tool, you can filter and pick stocks based on your desired criteria, including value, growth, momentum or even penny stocks. Scanz is a powerful stock trading software platform and acts as one of the best stock news options on this list. Consider starting a free trial to see how effective the service can be for capturing alpha in your portfolio. 11. Yahoo! Finance Available: Play Store, iOS Price: Free; contains ads and in-app purchases With Yahoo! Finance, you create your own portfolio, follow stocks you're interested in, and set up personalized alerts. Your research abilities within the app are extensive. There are current news stories telling you the most exciting investing insights. The app has interactive charts and a useful set of analytical tools. You can also view ESG ratings, historical financials, and top holders of companies. There is both a free and premium version. The Google Finance app is similar, but has far fewer users than Yahoo! Finance. 12. MarketWatch App Available: Play Store, iOS Price: Free; contains ads and in-app purchases The MarketWatch app, like the website, provides in-depth analytical information. Some of the app's top features include: Interactive Top Stories bar that allows you to customize your drop-down menu of other news channels News about the stock market, business, and finance Market data center with stocks, commodities, and rates updated in real-time Ability to track stock market data over various date ranges and regions Option to follow stock picks and read related stories to stay current on your investments When possible, many people still prefer the website because it is even more comprehensive, but the app is useful when a desktop isn't an option or you want to check a stock quickly. With an account, you can sync your watchlists between the website and your app. 13. Morningstar Available: Sign up here Price: Free 14-day trial and then $199 for 1 year; $339 for 2 years; $439 for 3 years; or $23.95 monthly Morningstar is a popular resource for investors looking to find, evaluate, and monitor investments that best meet their interests and needs. The app also provides up-to-date market news and financial stories, allowing investors to stay abreast of the market's latest developments. The company has provided market and stock research for almost four decades and prides itself on its independence and reputation for objectivity. Subscribing to this stock news and research service includes access to stock screeners, research reports and in-depth analysis to assess your investing options. Consider signing up to this stock investment research website to learn more about stocks. 14. The Wall Street Journal App Available: Play Store, iOS Price: $32.99/mo; contains ads and in-app purchases Investing expert and billionaire Warren Buffet reads six newspapers each day, one of which is The Wall Street Journal. This newspaper has long been known as one of the most reputable sources for financial information. Through the app, you can customize news and notifications to focus on the topics most relevant to you. You receive real-time updates and can access news from an Apple watch. Some articles and information are free on the app, but for full access, you need to pay monthly. 15. Stocktwits Available: Play Store, iOS Price: Free, contains ads and in-app purchases Stocktwits is basically Twitter, but people only talk about investing. In a Twitter-style feed, you can find what's happening in the market and stocks from the platform's over two million community members. Some traders post useful charts and videos with technical analysis. Stocktwits keeps you social with smart investors and everything is free. The feed doesn't update as often as actual Twitter and sometimes requires you to refresh rather than automatically updating. Still, it's a great way to interact with other people who invest and share tips with each other. 16. Barron's - Investing Insights Available: Play Store, iOS Price: Introductory offer of $1/week for first 52 weeks; contains ads and in-app purchases Barron's has been a trusted source for financial information since 1921 and downloading the app makes that information more easily accessible to you. You can view all of their investment articles from Wall Street experts and you can save or download the articles to read later. The most iconic of these articles is the Saturday print edition. You can also read the Asia Editions to get a global view of the stock market. Stock quotes are in real-time and interactive charts give you valuable insights. New subscribers to Barron's pay $14.99 per month for unlimited access to both the app and website. 17. E*Trade Available: Sign up here Price: $0 trades E-Trade is another app that will educate you about the stock market through news stories and educational resources as well as let you trade stocks, ETFs, mutual funds, or options within the app. You have access to Bloomberg TV®, breaking news, and third-party research. The analysis tools are designed to be simple to understand so you can determine the probabilities of an option trade within moments. Browse interactive charts, streaming quotes, and view stock's earnings, dividends, and more. Stockbrokers.com recently named E*Trade "Best in Class" among stock apps available to retail investors. Best Stock Market and Financial News Apps You need to find a way to keep abreast of market trends or you're taking shots in the dark. Investor Peter Lynch once said, "If you don't study any companies, you have the same success buying stocks as you do in a poker game if you bet without looking at your cards." Therefore, you need to educate yourself both on stocks and market activity. Thankfully, many financial news apps don't charge a fee because they offer in-app purchases and ads, offsetting the cost to you. Some charge a subscription fee but provide in-depth news and analysis to compensate for this expense.
