(Socrates, as quoted by Plato in Apology)"Success does not consist in never making mistakes but in never making the same one a second time." (George Bernard Shaw)The word "does" actually has two separate origins, leading to its two main meanings:"Does" as a verb (like "he does his homework").This "does" comes from the Old English word "dn," which meant "to make, act, perform, cause; to put, to place." It's related to similar words in other old Germanic languages. Over time, in Middle English, "do" started being used as an auxiliary (helping) verb, especially in questions and negative sentences, which is how we often use "does" today. Interestingly, "does" as the third-person singular present form (like "he does") was originally a regional variant in Old English, mainly from a northern dialect, and eventually replaced the older forms like "doth" or "doeth" in standard English by the 16th-17th centuries."Does" as a noun (plural of "doe," meaning a female deer):This "does" comes from the Old English word "d," which specifically meant "female deer." This word likely has Celtic roots. So, when you talk about "a herd of does," you're using a word that has a completely different historical journey than the verb form of "does." The first known use of "doe" (and by extension its plural "does") referring to a female deer dates back to before the 12th century. Here's a list of phrases and idioms using "does," or in some cases, its base form "do" where "does" would fit grammatically in a similar construction:How does that work? (A common question about a process or system)What does it take? (Asking about the requirements for something)Whatever does it mean? (An exclamation of confusion)As the crow does fly (Referring to a direct path, as "as the crow flies" is the common idiom)It does the trick. (It accomplishes the desired effect)He does his bit. (He contributes his share)She does him justice. (She represents him fairly or well)It does no good. (It is ineffective or unhelpful)If the shoe does fit... (A less common variant of "If the shoe fits, wear it," meaning if something applies, accept it)He does a good job. (He performs well) Definition of does from The Academic Glossary at Self Exploration Academy, a Utkville Press Publication. All rights reserved. KIRU/ Both do and does are present tense forms of the verb do. Which is the correct form to use depends on the subject of your sentence. In this article, we'll explain the difference between do and does, cover when and how to use each form, and provide examples of how they're used in sentences. Do is an irregular verb, which means that it has different forms depending on tense and the subject it's being used with. Both do and does are used for the present tense. The form does is only used with third person singular subjects, such as the pronouns he, she, and it, as in She does yoga. The form do is used for all other subjects, including for first person (I and we) and second person pronouns (you) and the third person pronoun they (regardless of whether its singular or plural), as in I do yoga, but they do not. The past tense form of do is did, and the past participle form is done. do vs. does The verb do is considered an irregular verb because its past tense and past participle are not formed by adding -ed or -d to the end of the base form as is the case in most verbs. In fact, do has a particularly unusual conjugation pattern compared to other verbs. Here are the different forms of do:do: Base/infinitive; used for present tense except with third person singular subjects (other than the singular they, which uses do regardless of whether its singular or plural).Example: I do my homework as soon as I get home.does: Used for third person singular present tense (other than singular they).Example: She does her homework as soon as she gets home.did: past tenseExample: She did her homework as soon as she got home.done: past participleExample: She had done homework for three hours after she got home. doing: present participle and gerundExample: She is doing her homework. The forms do, does, and did are also used in the negative contractions dont (do not), doesnt (does not), and didnt (did not). For example:Dont open the window. Luke doesnt know how to cook. Fortunately, the flowers didnt wither. Verbs similar to do The irregular verb do has a unique conjugation pattern. Some other irregular verbs that have an unusual conjugation pattern somewhat similar to do are go, be, and have.Base/Infinitive Present TensePast TensePast ParticiplePresent Participledo/doesdid/didonegoinggo/goingwentgonegoingbe/is/arewas/werebeenbeinghave/has/havehadhadhavingTo learn more about the forms of the verb be, check our guides to is vs. are, been vs. being, and has been vs. have been. Examples of do, does, did, and done used in a sentence The only thing left to do is look at how we typically use the forms do, did, and does in sentences.I've never done yoga, and I'm not sure if they do, but I'm sure that he does.I remember what I did last time, but I'm not sure if I should do it again.She did everything she could to make sure it was done by the deadline.I can't do even a fraction of the amazing things that my brother does on a regular basis.We did the vacuuming yesterday, the morning crew does the laundry on Fridays, and the night crew will do the floor waxing next month. We've understood, then, that using do and does in questions is essential, as well as in short answers and negations. But how do you do it? Let's take a look at it together.First, the difference between do and does is that we use:Do for the first and second person singular, the first, second, and third person plural.( I, you, we, you, they )Does for the third person singular( she, he, it )He do and his homework .That said, the structure of the questions should be as follows:Auxiliary Do/Does + Subject + Main verb + Object or other complements + ?Do you live in Australia? Do they know our address? Do they know our address?Does she want another cookie? Does she want another cookie? Does she want another cookie? When questions use interrogative words (when, who, what, why, how), do and does are used as auxiliary verbs for the simple present tense. The structure of the questions varies slightly depending on the interrogative word used.The general structure to follow is always the following:Interrogative word + do/does + subject + base verb + rest of the sentence + ?Let's look at some examples to better understand how it works in these cases.When do you wake up in the morning? When do you wake up in the morning?Where do Anna and John live? Where do Anna and John live?Why do you like this movie? Why do you like this movie?How do I get to the station? How do I get to the station?Why does he always arrive late? Why does he always arrive late?In case of a negative question, we will behave as follows:Why don't you like this movie?And in case of questions in the past , we simply conjugate the verb do in the past tense, leaving the main verb in the present tense.Why did you like the station? Why did you like this film? When did you wake up this morning? When did you wake up this morning?Please note : If "who" is the subject of the question, then it is not necessary to use the auxiliary verbs do and does.Who wants to come with me? Chi vuole venire con me? (Here it's the subject, so no do)Who do you know here? Chi conosci qui? (In this case it's not the subject, so the auxiliary is needed.) Verbs are essential to creating complete sentences, as they help us express physical actions (He jumped in the puddle), mental actions (He thought about puppies), and states of being (I am hungry). There are several types of verbs that can each be written in different tenses, so they can be tricky to work with, especially if English isn't your first language. We've put together a guide to help you use one of the most common verbs, do, in your writing. Read on below to learn more! As the name suggests, action verbs are used to express actions completed by the subject of a sentence. The base verb do is conjugated according to the tense: 1. Present Tense In the present tense, do takes the form do or does, depending on the subject. Subject:Verb:I/you/we/theyDidHe/she/itDid Consider the following examples: We did our homework last night. She did her homework last night. Auxiliary, or helping verbs, are used with another base verb to create negative sentences, questions, or add emphasis. Heres how do should be used as an auxiliary verb: 1. Negative Sentences Following the same subjectverb pairings introduced above, we combine the auxiliaries do, does, and did with the adverb not to create negative sentences: We do not do our homework every night. She did not do her homework last night. Note that we can combine the auxiliary and the adverb to create the contractions dont, doesnt, and didnt. You simply remove the space between the two words and replace the letter o in not with an apostrophe ('). Contractions are more common in conversations and informal writing and typically shouldn't be used in formal writing (e.g., academic or business). 2. Questions To create questions, the auxiliary is combined with the infinitive of another verb in this way; auxiliary verb + subject + infinitive verb. Simple present questions: Do they sell childrens books? Does he speak English? Note that the third person verb speaks isnt spelled with the s when paired with the auxiliary to form a question. Simple past questions: Did you buy anything at the bookstore? Did he learn how to speak English? Note that did indicates the past tense, so the main verbs dont also take the past tense (i.e., bought and learned). 3. Emphasis In positive sentences, we can also combine the auxiliaries do, does, and did with the main verb to emphasize that something is true: We do sell childrens books. He did learn to speak English. Try saying these sentences aloud and adding emphasis to the auxiliary terms with your tone. It adds a dramatic effect! Do you know the difference between 'do' or 'does' and when to use each one? If you don't, not to worry; that's what this article is here to help you with.In short, 'do' and 'does' are both present tenses of the verb 'to do.' 'Does' is used with third-person singular pronouns.'Do' is used with all the other pronouns.Comparing 'Do' or 'Does''Do' and 'does' are both forms of the present indefinite tense of the verb 'to do.' Which one you'll use will mostly depend on the sentence's subject. Their usage is almost identical, except for one instance where you can use 'do' and not 'does.'I'll cover all of them in this article.How to Use 'Do' or 'Does'The verb 'do' can be either a main or helping verb.'Do' and 'Does' as Main VerbsAs a main verb, it denotes action. 'To do' something is "to perform, take part in, or achieve something." Here's how the verb is conjugated in the present tense:I doYou doShe/he/it doesWe doThey doYou doAs you can see, we use 'does' with the third-person singular pronouns and 'do' with all the others.What does that look like in practice? Here are a couple of examples of 'do' and 'does' used as main verbs:What shall we do now?'I don't know what she does all day.' 'Do' and 'Does' as Helping Verbs'Do' and 'does' can also be used as helping verbs to form questions. The same pronoun rules apply here. For example:Do you like karaoke?'Does he cycle to work?'In both cases, 'do' isn't the main verb; instead, it helps the main verb.'like' in the first sentence and 'cycle' in the second one.Top Tip! The only verb 'do' can't help is the verb 'to be.' You couldn't say, for example, 'Do you be happy?'. Using 'Do' and 'Does' To Avoid RepetitionYou can also use 'do' and 'does' to avoid repeating the main verb when it's already been stated.This comes in handy when answering a question. For example, if someone asks us if we like tomatoes, instead of saying, "Yes, I like tomatoes," we can say, "Yes, I do." "Do you like tomatoes?'Yes, I do does she like tomatoes?'Yes, she does.It doesn't have to be an answer to a question, though. It can also be used as a substitute verb in almost any sentence to avoid repetition or when the main verb is obvious. For example:He types much faster than she does.Instead of repeating the verb 'type,' we use 'does' as a replacement. Here's another example:I don't play with my dog in the house; I do it in the garden.'Do' replaces the main verb 'play.'Using 'Do' and 'Does' for EmphasisSometimes you can use 'do' or 'does' to emphasize what you're about to say. So, for example, if you want to say that you like a T-shirt, you can accentuate the verb 'like' with 'do.'I do like that T-shirt.Or with 'does,' if the pronoun is third person singular:She does like that T-shirt.Using 'Do' for Imperative SentencesRemember when I said earlier that there was one instance where you could use 'do' but not 'does'? Yep, so that's what I'll explain now.You can use 'do' with the imperative mood. You use this mood to give someone an order or make a request.Do the dishes, please.Do stop by on your way home.Do not tease your brother.Using "Do" or "Does" in Negative FormI wanted to mention a quick word about using 'do' and 'does' in the negative form. If you're forming a negative sentence, you can still use 'do' and 'does' in the same ways as described above, except you'll use the negative form of the verbs:Do do not / don'tDoes does not / doesn'tPronunciation: 'Do' and 'Does'Now that we've covered all the different usages of the 'do' and 'does,' would you like to know how to pronounce them?'Do' rhymes with 'blue,' 'moo,' and 'shoe.' It sounds like this: [ doo ]As for 'does,' it rhymes with 'buzz' and 'because' and sounds like this: [ duhz ]In case you're curious, here are the International Phonetics Alphabet spellings: / dɑ / dɒz / Examples of 'Do' and 'Does'I know we've looked at plenty of examples, but I will list a few more here for each word because I believe repetition and practice are the best ways to improve our English skills. Therefore, the more examples you see, the better you'll understand how to use the words.Let's start with 'do.'How to Use 'Do' in a SentenceI do like the color blue.They've broken up again; they do this annually.Do you want your apple pie?How to Use 'Does' in a SentenceI love the way she does her makeup.My dog always does a little excited bark when I tell him we're going out.Yes, he does believe in Santa Claus.Concluding ThoughtsThat concludes this article on the difference between 'do' and 'does' and how to use them correctly. Let's summarize what we've learned:'Do' and 'does' are present tense forms of the verb 'to be.'Use 'does' with the third-person singular pronounUse 'do' with all the other pronounsYou can also use 'do' to form an imperative sentence with any pronounIf you found this article helpful, you might like the others in our Confusing Words blog archive.
