Road Cams Snow Cams Contact Finding an address unknown to us is not always easy, but it is incredibly tricky and annoying when unexpected traffic jams prevent us from reaching our destination. The emergence and spread of online maps are undoubtedly one of the most exceptional help when traveling, but thankfully that's not all! Thanks to recent developments by the largest map providers (Google Maps, Bing Maps, MapQuest, or Apple Maps), route planning can also be optimized based on real-time traffic congestion. Using the map below, e.g., you can quickly check what traffic conditions you may encounter at your destination or on the go. Plan and overcome unexpected traffic situations. Tip: Use the Choose view menu in the bottom-right corner of the map to display traffic conditions, roadblocks, traffic incidents, satellite maps, terrain maps, and public transport. The real-time traffic map above shows the users' current traffic information for major highways and roads in over 50 countries. The feature uses four-color codes (black, red, yellow, and green) to indicate traffic volume, from the most massive traffic to the lightest traffic situations. Waze is a fantastic navigation app with many features to help you get where you're going. Its reliable, user-friendly, and accurate, making it an excellent option for those looking for an alternative to Google Maps. With millions of users worldwide, Waze is also a popular choice for those who want to avoid traffic congestion and find the best route to their destination. If you want route planning, visit our driving directions page, where you can also control traffic congestion on the go. The dreaded red lines on the map mean highway traffic is moving at less than 25 miles / 40.2 km per hour and could indicate an accident or congestion on that route. Yellow lines on the map indicate that traffic moves faster, from 25 to 50 miles / 40.2 to 80.46 km per hour. Green lines on the traffic map indicate zipping along 50 miles / 80.46 km per hour or more. If you see grey lines on the map, no traffic information is available at the time. The Red-black line on the map indicates extremely slow or stopped traffic. Map multiple locations, get transit/walking/driving directions, view live traffic conditions, plan trips, and view satellite, aerial, and street side imagery.
