Yes, you can reset your DoorDash account! This can be done from the DoorDash app. First, open up the DoorDash app. Then, press the "Settings" icon in the top right corner of the app. From here, select the option "Account". On this page, you will find the "Reset Account" button. Press this button to begin the process of resetting your account. You will be asked to confirm your action before any changes are made. Once your account is reset, you will no longer have access to past order history, saved cards, and dasher preferences. You will, however, still have access to your profile information and settings. Can I delete my DoorDash account and make a new one? Yes, you can delete your DoorDash account and make a new one. In order to delete a DoorDash account, you will need to contact DoorDash customer service through the DoorDash help page or app. You can indicate that you would like to delete your account and customer service will be able to assist you from there. After your account has been deleted, you can create a new one by downloading the DoorDash app and registering for a new account. How do you reset the DoorDash driver app? To reset the DoorDash driver app, you first need to ensure that your app is fully updated to the latest version. Then, you should go to the 'Settings' page within the DoorDash app and select the 'Reset Driver App' option. Follow the on-screen instructions to reset the app. Once this is done, your app will be completely reset. After the reset, you will need to log in again to your account and set up your profile and payment information, as these will also have been reset. Finally, you will need to go through the onboarding process to make sure your app is ready to accept deliveries. What is the DoorDash glitch? The DoorDash glitch was an error that affected some customers of the food delivery service DoorDash in late 2020. The glitch caused orders to be marked as "completed" on the platform, meaning they were given the status of being ready to be picked up or delivered, despite never having been accepted or completed by the restaurant partner. This caused a number of customers to experience delays or not receive their order at all. As a result of this glitch, some customers received incorrect charges or inaccurate order information. In response to this incident, DoorDash put out a public apology and released a statement on their website acknowledging the issue. They also gave a full refund for all customers affected and implemented a number of measures to improve their system. These include improved communication with their customers and a stronger focus on making sure the correct status is given for all orders. Can DoorDash be a full time job? Yes, DoorDash can be a full-time job. Many people have successfully built up their DoorDash earnings to the point where it provides their full-time job. However, there are a few things to consider before committing to DoorDash as your sole source of income. First, take a look at how much DoorDash is in your area. The app is often slow and orders are piling up between, you may need to look for additional sources of income. Second, you need to consider how much you can realistically make with DoorDash. Most people are able to make an average of about $2-$20 per hour, with top earners making up to $30/hour. Third, think about the operational costs you'll need to factor in before you commit to DoorDash. You'll need to set aside a portion of your income to pay for gas and vehicle maintenance. Additionally, you'll need to factor in taxes and other expenses, such as purchasing food safety supplies or a vehicle rental (if you don't can have your own). Finally, consider the impact that DoorDash might have on your personal life. This can include lack of time for children, or fatigue due to long hours of driving and delivering. In conclusion, DoorDash can be a full-time job for many people, but it's important to take into account how reliable the app is in your area, how much you can make, the operational costs that you'll need to factor in, and the potential impact on your personal life. With the right planning and dedication, you could be successfully managing your finances with DoorDash. How hard is it to get fired from DoorDash? It is relatively hard to get fired from DoorDash because the company has a stringent onboarding process which includes background checks and verification. The company also operates a performance-based system wherein delivery staff is monitored and evaluated on their speed, accuracy and customer service. If an employee fails to meet the company's standards, they will be subjected to corrective measures such as warnings or suspension. These measures may sometimes lead to termination if the employee continues to fail to meet the company's expectations. Additionally, DoorDash reserves the right to terminate any employee at any time without prior notice or reason if it believes it to be necessary. Thus, while terminating employees is not impossible, DoorDash's clear onboarding process, monitoring and evaluation system, and reserve rights to termination all contribute to making it relatively hard to get fired from DoorDash. How long does it take to create a DoorDash account? It generally takes between 10 and 48 hours for DoorDash to reactivate an account after it has been suspended or deactivated. Once your account is reactivated, you will be able to immediately pick up any new orders. To help speed up the reactivation process, you should make sure that you have provided information that is necessary for DoorDash to accurately verify your account. This typically includes a valid government-issued ID, an address verification document, and an updated banking information. Additionally, if possible, it's also recommended that you update your profile information, including any recent changes in your phone number, address, and other contact information. Following these steps should help to ensure that reactivating your account is a swift and smooth process. Do DoorDash violations go away? Whether DoorDash violations go away or not depends on the specific violation and the resolution that has been put in place. Generally, DoorDash violations will be indicated for a period of time on your DoorDash profile, and some may remain permanently visible. However, serious violations may result in the suspension or even permanent ban from the platform. Depending on the violation, DoorDash may require the completion of additional training, agreement to further terms and conditions, or resolution of a dispute with a customer. In any case, issue resolution may vary between individuals or infractions and will require communication with DoorDash's team to obtain an understanding of any particular violation. Can I change my ID on DoorDash? Yes, you can change your DoorDash ID. The process is simple and straightforward; all you have to do is log in to your account. Once you're logged in, go to the Profile section and select the "Change Identity" option. From there, you can enter a new DoorDash ID that you want to use for your account. Once you have updated the ID, you will be able to use the same account with the new ID. You can also choose to update your name, email address, phone number, and other information associated with the account if you would like. Be sure to always review the information associated with your account to ensure it is up to date. Can DoorDash driver see your name? Yes, DoorDash drivers can see your name when you place an order. When you place an order, DoorDash will share your name and delivery address with the assignee who is delivering your order. Additionally, any restaurant you have saved or any payment methods you have saved will also be shared. Furthermore, any past or future orders you have placed will be cancelled and any DoorDash credits or rewards you have earned will be forfeited. Finally, you will no longer have access to the background check. This helps ensure that only qualified drivers are delivering food to you. Drivers also cannot access your full contact information, only enough to complete the order. The best way to ensure a safe and secure delivery experience is to double-check the driver's name and photo when they arrive. That way, you can be sure your food will arrive from a DoorDash driver you can trust. Is $3 a good tip for DoorDash? Whether or not $3 is a good tip for DoorDash depends on the individual situation. In general, tipping $3 for DoorDash delivery is usually considered a good tip. It is substantially more than the standard tip of 15% for restaurant delivery and can show appreciation for the delivery person's effort in bringing the order to the customer's doorstep. It is an amount that is appreciated but not so high that it might make the customer feel obligated or pressured to tip that amount every time. Furthermore, tips are one of the few sources of income for DoorDash delivery people, so tips can go a long way to make sure they're fairly compensated for their work. Can you do DoorDash on two phones? Yes, it is possible to do DoorDash on two phones. DoorDash allows up to five devices to be linked to a single driver dashboard. To do this, you'll need to have two separate DoorDash driver accounts with two separate emails associated with them. From there, you can simply log into the main dashboard on both phones, and use the 'Add Device' feature (found in the Account Settings) to link the two phones. This will give you the ability to access both accounts at the same time. Additionally, you can use one phone to accept deliveries and the other to pick up food. Can I DoorDash anonymously? No, you cannot DoorDash anonymously. DoorDash follows all applicable laws and regulations, which includes the collection of your personal information in order to complete an order. Every DoorDash order requires the customer's full name, e-mail address, and phone number to be entered into the system, as well as the customer's payment card and billing address. DoorDash also requires customers to enter their real street address and "pin" code as a part of the delivery process. This is to ensure the safety of all customers, drivers, and restaurant partners. Can I use a different name on DoorDash? Yes, you can use a different name on DoorDash. You can update your name to whatever you'd like. To do this, go to the "My Account" page on the app or website. At the top of the page, you will see an option to update your name. Once you select this option, you can input the name that you would like to use and make sure to hit "Save" when you are done. With the updated name, orders will be attributed to the new name you've selected, so be sure to change the name if you're looking to order something on someone else's behalf. Can customers track you on DoorDash? Yes, customers can track their DoorDash orders. DoorDash has a real-time tracking feature, which allows customers to track their orders as soon as they're placed. Customers can see exactly when their order is accepted and when their Dasher is on their way to the restaurant and to their delivery location. They can also contact their Dasher directly if they need any additional help with their order. Additionally, customers can log in to their DoorDash accounts and check the status of their orders to get updates on their progress. Can I make a new DoorDash driver account? Yes, you can make a new DoorDash driver account. To get started, you'll need to first sign up for a Dasher account. You'll need to provide your basic information, including your name, address, driver's license number, and social security number. In addition to this, you'll also need to complete a background check and pass the Driver Safety Education Course. Once you have completed all the steps required to sign up for an account, you'll be able to start your DoorDash journey. You'll be able to set your own hours and select the orders you'd like to take, so you'll have lots of flexibility. Make sure to read all of DoorDash's terms and conditions before you get started to ensure you understand your rights and responsibilities as a driver. What happens if I delete my DoorDash account? If you delete your DoorDash account, all of your personal information and order history will be permanently removed from the DoorDash platform. This includes any personal information you have stored such as your name, email address, phone number, address, and payment information. Additionally, any restaurants you have saved or any payment methods you have saved will also be deleted. Furthermore, any past or future orders you have placed will be cancelled and any DoorDash credits or rewards you have earned will be forfeited. Finally, you will no longer have access to the DoorDash app or website. Is DoorDash deactivation permanent? No, DoorDash deactivation is not permanent. If you are deactivated, you can contact DoorDash's support team and explain the reason for your deactivation. Depending on the reason, you may be reinstated and allowed to continue using the DoorDash platform. Deactivation can happen for various issues like low customer ratings, account inactivity, late orders, improper conduct, or other violations of the DoorDash Terms & Conditions. DoorDash reviews each case individually and may allow you to return to using the platform. If you are not reinstated, DoorDash may still offer you the opportunity to reapply after a set period of time. How can financial brands set themselves apart through visual storytelling? 2024)Number of employees:23,700 (2024)WebsteddoorDash.comFootnotes / references:[21][3] DoorDash, Inc. is an American company operating online food ordering and food delivery. It trades under the symbol DASH.[4] With a 56% market share, DoorDash is the largest food delivery platform in the United States. It also has a 60% market share in the United States as of December 31, 2020, to a platform that was used by 450,000 merchants, 20 million consumers, and had over one million delivery couriers.[6] Founded by Tony Xu, Andy Fang, and Stanley Tang, DoorDash made its debut on the Fortune 500 list in 2024, ranking #43.[7] DoorDash has been sued for and/or held legally liable for withholding tips, reducing tip transparency, antitrust price manipulation, listing restaurants without permission, misclassifying workers, withholding sick time, and illegally selling personal data.[8][9][10][11] Outside the United States, DoorDash and its European subsidiary Wolt have operations in a combined total of 32 other countries as of the end of 2024. In January 2013, Stanford University students Tony Xu, Stanley Tang, and Andy Fang launched PaloAltoDelivery.com in Palo Alto, California.[12] In the summer of 2013, it received US$120,000 in seed money from Y Combinator in exchange for a 7% stake. It incorporated as DoorDash in June 2013.[13][14] In December 2018, DoorDash overtook Uber Eats to hold the second position in total US food delivery sales, behind GrubHub.[15] By March 2019, it had exceeded GrubHub in total sales, at 27.6% of the on-demand delivery market.[16] By early 2019, DoorDash was the largest food delivery provider in the U.S., as measured by consumer spending.[17] In October 2019, DoorDash opened its first ghost kitchen, DoorDash Kitchen, in Redwood City, California, with four restaurants operating at the location.[18] By June 2020, DoorDash had raised more than $2.5 billion over several financing rounds from investors including Y Combinator, Charles River Ventures, SV Angel, Khosla Ventures, Sequoia Capital, SoftBank Group,[19] GIC,[20] and Kleiner Perkins.[21] In November 2020, DoorDash announced the opening of its first physical restaurant location, partnering up with Bay Area restaurant Burma Bites to offer delivery and pick-up orders.[22][23] On December 9, 2020, the company became a public company via an initial public offering, raising $3.37 billion.[24][41][25] In August 2022, DoorDash announced it would end its partnership with Walmart in September, ending the companies' cooperation agreement from 2016.[26] In late November 2022, DoorDash announced plans to lay off 1,250 corporate employees, or about six percent of their workforce. This was to rein in expenses.[27] In June 2023, DoorDash announced it would give its drivers the option of earning an hourly minimum wage instead of being paid per delivery. However, drivers are only paid hourly when on an active delivery.[28] In September 2023, the company transferred its stock listing from the New York Stock Exchange to the Nasdaq.[29] On December 19, 2023, DoorDash was added to the Nasdaq.[30] In March 2025, DoorDash announced a partnership with Klarna, a Buy Now, Pay Later (BNPL) service, letting customers schedule small payments over a set period of time. DoorDash received widespread criticism from this decision, including internet mockery.[31] June concerns about the increase of household debt in America.[32][33][34][35] In 2025, DoorDash will acquire the UK-based delivery service Deliveroo for $3.88 billion. The combined company will operate in 40 countries and serve 50 million users monthly.[36] A delivery worker on an electric bicycle during a snowstorm in New York City In 2017, a class-action lawsuit was filed against DoorDash for allegedly misclassifying delivery drivers in California and Massachusetts as independent contractors. In 2022, a tentative settlement was reached in which DoorDash would pay $100 million total, with $61 million going to over 900,000 drivers, paying out just over $130 per driver, and $28 million for the lawyers.[37][10] Gizmodo criticized the settlement, noting that the $413 million that DoorDash CEO Tony Xu received the previous year was one of the largest CEO compensation packages of all time.[10] On May 4, 2019, DoorDash confirmed 4.9 million customers, delivery workers and merchants had sensitive information stolen via a data breach. Those who joined the platform after April 5, 2018, were unaffected by the breach.[38] A class-action lawsuit for the breach was filed against DoorDash in October 2019.[39] In July 2019, the company's tipping policy was criticized by The New York Times, and later The Verge and Vox and Gothamist.[8][40][41][42] Drivers receive a guaranteed minimum per order that is paid by DoorDash by default. When a customer added a tip, instead of going directly to the driver, it first went to the company to cover the minimum. Drivers then only directly received the part of the tip that exceeded the guaranteed minimum per order.[42][43] In January 2020, it was reported that DoorDash had lied about skimming tips from its drivers, causing them to earn an average of $1.45 an hour after expenses, and that after the company had allegedly overhauled its tipping system, DoorDash was still manipulating per-delivery payouts at the expense of drivers.[44][45][46][47] A DoorDash customer filed a class action lawsuit against the company for its "materially false and misleading" tipping policy.[42][43] The case was referred to arbitration in August 2020.[48] Under pressure, the company revised its policy.[49][50] The company settled a lawsuit with District of Columbia Attorney General Karl Racine for $2.5 million, with funds going to deliverers, the government, and to charity.[51][52][53] In July 2021, DoorDash drivers went on strike to protest lack of tip transparency and to ask for higher pay. At the time of the strike, and, as of June 2022, DoorDash did not allow drivers to see the full tip amounts prior to accepting a delivery in the app. If customers tip over a set amount for the order total, DoorDash hides a portion of the tip until the delivery is complete. The strike occurred after DoorDash rewrote its code to cut off access to Para, a third-party app that drivers had been using to see the full tip amounts.[54][9] In 2025, DoorDash agreed to pay around $17 million for "misleading both consumers and delivery workers" with tips being docked from drivers' pay instead of directly going to drivers.[55][56][57] In April 2020, in the case of Davitashvili v. GrubHub Inc., DoorDash, Grubhub, Postmates, and Uber Eats were accused of monopolistic power by only listing restaurants on their apps if the restaurant owners signed contracts which include clauses that require prices be the same for dine-in customers as for customers receiving delivery.[58][59][60][61] The plaintiffs stated that this arrangement increases the cost for dine-in customers, as they are required to subsidize the cost of delivery; and that the apps charge "exorbitant" fees, which range from 13% to 40% of revenue, while the average restaurant's profit ranges from 3% to 9% of revenue.[58][59][60][61] The lawsuit seeks treble damages, including for overcharges, since April 14, 2016, for dine-in and delivery customers in the United States at restaurants using the defendants' delivery apps, [11][58][59][60][61] Although several preliminary documents in the case have now been filed, a trial date has not yet been set.[62] In May 2021, DoorDash was criticized for unauthorized listings of restaurants that had not given permission to appear on the app.[63] This aspect of DoorDash was sued by Lona's LI Eats in St. Louis, with the lawsuit claiming that DoorDash had listed them without permission, then prevented any orders to the restaurant from going through and redirecting customers to other restaurants instead, because Lona's was "too far away," when in reality it had not paid DoorDash a fee for listing.[64] This aspect of DoorDash's business practice is illegal in California.[64] In August 2021, the city of Chicago sued DoorDash and GrubHub. According to Chicago mayor Lori Lightfoot, the companies broke the law by using "unfair and deceptive tactics to take advantage of restaurants and consumers who were struggling to stay afloat during the COVID-19 pandemic." [65] DoorDash and GrubHub denied the suit's merits.[65] DoorDash has been accused of charging users of iPhone more than users on the Android platform. User testing claimed to show several instances of various fees and delivery charges being higher when using an Apple device. DoorDash denied these allegations in response to the ongoing US$1 billion class-action suit.[66] In August 2023, DoorDash was obligated to pay its drivers and the city of Seattle a total of $1.6 million.[67] It was found that the platform made it difficult for users to request paid time off. DoorDash is to pay $1.1 million towards safe and sick time credits, $500k directly to drivers and an additional $8,500 in city fees. In February 2024, after being found to have illegally sold personal data, DoorDash was obligated to pay a $375,000 civil penalty as well as to begin complying with privacy laws it had been shirking, namely CCPA and CalOPPA.[68] DoorDash began expanding into international markets in 2015, launching in Toronto, Canada.[69] The company started operating in markets outside North America in 2019, officially launching in Melbourne, Australia, in September and later expanding further into the country.[70][71] In 2021, the company expanded its service area to Sendai, Japan in June[72] and Stuttgart, Germany in November.[73] In June 2022, the company expanded into the Wellington Region of New Zealand.[74] The company expanded its service offerings in 2020, adding grocery delivery initially in California and the Midwest in August 2020, DoorDash expanded the service offerings in 2021 to include Doubledash, which allows for orders from multiple merchants, and alcohol delivery in 20 U.S. states, Washington, D.C., Canada, and Australia.[76][77] In August 2019, the company acquired Scotty Labs, a tele-operations startup company that focuses on self-driving and remote-controlled vehicle technology.[78][79] In October 2019, DoorDash acquired Caviar, a service specializing in food delivery from upscale urban-area restaurants that typically do not offer delivery, from Square, Inc. for $410 million.[80][81][82] On February 8, 2021, DoorDash announced its acquisition of Chowbotics, a robotics company known for its salad-making robot.[83][84][85] The companies did not disclose the terms of the deal, but Chowbotics was valued at $46 million in 2018.[86] On November 9, 2021, DoorDash announced its acquisition of the Finnish technology company Wolt for over $8.1 billion.[87] In April 2025, the company made an initial offer to acquire Deliveroo, a UK-based food delivery company, for £2.7 billion($3.6 billion).[88][89] In May 2025, DoorDash announced it had acquired Deliveroo for $3.9 billion.[90] In May 2025, DoorDash announced the $1.2 billion all-cash acquisition of restaurant booking platform for over SevenRooms.[91] In 2018, DoorDash launched Project DASH, a partnership with local food security organizations to deliver donations to food in need.[92] By August 2019, the program had expanded to 25 cities in the United States and Canada and had delivered more than one million pounds of food.[93] As of September 2021, Project DASH operated in more than 900 cities and had delivered more than 15 million meals.[94][95] DoorDash partnered with the National Urban League in 2020 as part of its Main Street Strong program, pledging $200 million over five years to support restaurants and drivers during the COVID-19 pandemic, $12 million of which was allotted to assisting drivers of color in building job skills and financial literacy.[96] In 2022, DoorDash partnered with Meals on Wheels to help deliver food to senior citizens.[97] Food delivery "When DoorDash was young: The early years", January 4, 2019, "DoorDash, Inc. 2024 Annual Report (Form 10-K)", U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission, February 14, 2025. "Restaurants Are Desperate — But You May Not Be Helping When You Use Delivery Apps". NPR. Archived from the original on May 17, 2020. Retrieved May 20, 2020. Frank points to a clause in the contracts restaurants and the food delivery apps agree to that prohibits owners from charging delivery customers more than people who dine in, even though delivery costs more. "By not forcing those purchasing on apps to bear the whole amount of the fees, instead forcing all menu prices to rise together, in-restaurant diners are effectively subsidizing Grubhub's high rates," said Frank, who argues such an arrangement is anti-competitive and illegal. Each of the firms uses "monopoly power" to prevent competition, limit consumer choice and force restaurants to agree to illegal contracts that have "the purpose and effect of fixing prices," the suit claimed. "... The four companies give restaurants a 'devil's choice' that requires them to keep dine-in prices the same as delivery prices if they want to be on the app-based delivery platforms, the suit claimed. And restaurants must pay commissions to the delivery firms ranging from 13.5% to 40%, the suit alleged. "... Establishments are forced to "calibrate their prices to the more costly meals served through the delivery apps," the suit alleged. "a b c Stempel, Jonathan (April 13, 2020). "Grubhub, DoorDash, Postmates, Uber Eats are sued over restaurant prices amid pandemic". Reuters. Archived from the original on April 17, 2020. Retrieved May 19, 2020. GrubHub, DoorDash, Postmates and Uber Eats were sued on Monday for allegedly exploiting their dominance in restaurant meal deliveries to impose fees that consumers ultimately bear through higher menu prices, including during the coronavirus pandemic. In a proposed class action filed in Manhattan federal court, three consumers said the defendants violated U.S. antitrust law by requiring that restaurants charge delivery customers and dine-in customers the same price, while imposing "exorbitant" fees of 10% to 40% of revenue to process delivery orders. The consumers, all from New York, said this sticks restaurants with a "devil's choice" of charging everyone higher prices as a condition of using the defendants' services. The New York customers, who seek class-action status, say the delivery services charge "exorbitant fees" that range from 13% to 40% of revenue, while the average restaurant's profit ranges from 3% to 9% of revenue, making delivery meals more expensive for eateries. "Restaurants could offer consumers lower prices for direct sales, because direct consumers are more profitable," the plaintiffs said.
