What's out of a seaside trail - Multihued Seashells, the sparkling blue ocean, orange scutching crabs - offer infinity inspiration, especially for an ink palette. We ask for three top designers to restrict your choices even more. Here, they reveal their favorite ink colors for a beach retreat, sandy neutral to the green of the sea. All that remains to do is take advantage of this incredible view. "I love a white cabot stain in Pecky cypress panel, as is the most beautiful color of bin / sunshine of the sun and feels more natural near a beach. This is what I used in our house on Harbor Island as well as many other beach houses. "Alessandra White" I like the slightly temperamental approach of the following scheme: painted walls of Benjamin Moore Sterling, painted bands of pratt stone launch Lambert, and ceiling and painted garrison of Benjamin Moore White-01. This darker and strip trim tend to frame the room and finally the view. "- Steven Gambrel" Benjamin Moore Lime Foam for the walls and Jack Frost for the ceiling. The aqua is A clear and clear blue that, when used on a ceiling, makes a beach house feel much more open to the elements. It facilitates the cabinet sensation a white ceiling can create. The pale green It's super cool - a heat break and sunshine in the sand, but still a sweet garden color that feels of fresh air. Copyright ? 2013 Meredith Corporation. The three primary, red, yellow and blue colors, are visible in the light spectrum and, as such, are at the top of each color wheel or color configuration. These three colors are the root of all other colors of the world. When these colors are combined, the secondary and tertiary colors are formed. What are secondary colors? There are three secondary colors that are created when two primary colors are combined. These colors are orange, which is a mixture of yellow and red, purple, which is a mixture of red and blue, and green, which is a mixture of blue and yellow. As with the primary colors, you can include neutral as black or white to create different hues. What are the tertiary colors? There are six tertiary colors, and these are created mixing a primary and secondary color together. These colors include yellow and orange, red and orange, red and purple, blue and purple, blue and green and yellow and green. There are, of course, different names for some of the tertiary colors, depending on the hue. You can also refer to red and purple as Burgundy, depending on the shadow. However, the official color name is red and purple. What are neutral colors? If you look at a standard color wheel, you do not see neutral colors, which include black, white, gray and occasionally brown. These are also referred to as "earth tones". These colors can be mixed with primary, secondary and tertiary colors to create different tones or hue. How do you create different shades of blue? You can create different tones, or blue men, mixing colors. Neutral colors such as white or black, work best to create varied tones, but you can also create different shades of blue by adding a little secondary or tertiary color. For example, you can add purple to blue to a periwinkle shadow. What are complementary colors for blue? To discover the complementary colors of blue, or for any color, you can look directly into the color wheel. The complementary color will be on the exact opposite side of the wheel. For blue, complementary colors are orange, followed by yellow and red. This does not mean that you can not pair other colors with blue. Because of the nature of Blue as primary color, it is based well with many different shades and hues. For example, blue and shades of green can work well together.
