Auto replace will complete or replace the word you are typing with the word it thinks is the most likely for the sentence. As you type, words will be highlighted blue in the middle space of the predictive text bar. To insert the highlighted word, tap the space bar or enter key. This feature can be activated or deactivated via the "Samsung Keyboard settings" menu. Tap "Auto replace", then tap the switch to activate or deactivate the setting. If your Galaxy phone or tablet won't stop rotating its screen, or, on the other hand, if it does not rotate at all, don't panic. Your device comes with screen rotation settings built right in. It's just a matter of making sure you have the correct settings in place. You can make your device's screen rotate freely with Auto rotate, or lock it in one position using either Portrait or Landscape mode. There are three different icons used for changing your screen orientation: Auto rotate, Portrait, and Landscape. Auto rotate: Allows your device's screen orientation to automatically adjust and rotate depending on how you are holding your device. For example, if you turn your device sideways, the screen will automatically switch to Landscape mode. The Auto rotate icon looks like a small phone surrounded by two arrows. The icon will glow blue when enabled. Portrait or Landscape mode: Portrait locks the screen in the upwards position, while Landscape locks the screen in the sideways position. Both icons look like a lock and are gray when enabled. When enabled, your device's screen will not rotate based on how you are holding it, however apps that are designed for a specific mode will rotate the screen as necessary. Auto rotate is turned on by default when you first get your phone or tablet, but it can be turned off at any time. Locking your screen in either Portrait or Landscape mode is actually the same thing as turning off Auto rotate. Once Auto rotate is disabled, your device will lock in whatever position you were holding it in. To adjust the screen rotation settings: Swipe down from the top of the screen to open the Quick settings panel. Look for the screen orientation icon. Depending on your settings, you may need to look for the Portrait, Landscape, or Auto Rotate icon. Remember, the Portrait and Landscape icons are gray when they're active, while the Auto Rotate icon is blue when enabled. If the screen is locked in Portrait or Landscape mode and you need to change it, tap the icon (either Portrait or Landscape) so it activates Auto rotate. If Auto rotate is already activated, you don't need to select anything. After Auto rotate is enabled, close the Quick settings panel. Next, hold your device in your desired position - either upright or sideways. Open Quick settings again. Whether you are holding your device upwards or sideways, swipe down from the top of the screen. Tap the Auto rotate icon to lock your device in your desired position. Remember, Portrait is when the device is upwards, and Landscape is when the device is sideways. Once your screen is locked in Portrait or Landscape mode, your screen will no longer rotate when you turn your device. To unlock your screen or change the screen orientation, repeat these same steps until you've set your desired screen position. Note: Some apps may not be capable of rotation and will still open in Portrait or Landscape mode by default. Many screens may not support rotating the device upside-down. Does your Quick settings panel seem to be missing the Rotate icon? There may be a simple explanation. If the screen is locked in Portrait or Landscape, the screen orientation icon will be labeled as such. The Auto rotate icon will only appear if the Auto rotate feature is activated. If you see an icon that says Portrait or Landscape, you can tap it to enable Auto rotate. Or, you can just leave it alone if you'd prefer to keep your device's screen orientation locked. If you still cannot find the screen orientation icon, it's possible that you accidentally removed it from the Quick settings panel. But don't worry, it's easy to add back. Swipe down from the top of the screen to open the Quick settings panel. Tap More options (the three vertical dots), and then tap Edit buttons, Touch and hold the Auto rotate icon, and then drag it to your desired position. When you're finished, tap Done. Now the Rotate icon will be easy to reach and you can adjust your screen's rotation settings accordingly. By default, your device's screen will not rotate when you are on the Home screen, but you can change this. Simply go to your Home screen settings to make your Home screen rotate sideways. To check other rotation settings, open the Quick settings panel by swiping down from the top of the screen. Touch and hold the Auto rotate icon to open its settings, and then review the options for the Home screen, Lock screen, and Voice call screen. You can turn on your preferred settings by tapping the switches next to them, and then tapping Done. Note: This option is not available on tablets. Even if Auto rotate is enabled, you can temporarily lock the screen so it doesn't rotate. This can be helpful if you are looking at a PDF or document and want to rotate your hand or device without changing your screen orientation. To do this, keep a finger on the screen while turning the phone or tablet. The screen will stay in its original orientation as long as you hold your finger in place. Release your finger to allow the screen to rotate. Thank you for your feedback! mobilephones © 2022 Samsung Electronics America, Inc. Device LinksAndroidiPhoneMacWindowsDevice Missing?Predictive text is a convenient feature designed to help users type faster and more accurately, thanks to the software learning and adapting over time. However, not everyone likes using it because of how robotic emails can appear. Fortunately, Outlook users can turn it off and type without the constant recommendations.If you use Outlook often and are tired of the predictive text, you're in luck. Outlook will let you turn the feature off, but you must navigate the settings first. Keep on reading for all the details.How to Turn Off Predictive Text in Outlook on a Windows PCOutlook is now included in the Microsoft 365 package, which you can download and install on Windows. The Windows client isn't too different from the web-based version. We'll cover the latter in a separate section.Predictive text in Outlook will only recommend words that may fit the email you want to send. You can pick any suggestion you wish to as it appears onscreen by pressing the Tab and Right Arrow key. If you don't see anything you like, you can ignore it and continue typing.While the predictive text works well for many users, you can still turn it off. Here's how:Launch Outlook for Windows.Start writing an email.Go to "File."Select "Options."In the list, uncheck the "Show Text Predictions While Typing" box.Type and see if the predictive text is still active.Now, you can type your emails without the predictive text appearing.There are several reasons why some users would prefer not to turn predictive text on. Microsoft employs machine learning to study your writing habits and characteristics. That's why the predictive text feature can guess what you want to type quite accurately.While Microsoft claims that the data their machines gather isn't stored or seen by humans, it's not everyone's cup of tea. Thus, it's one of several reasons why Outlook users will turn it off and compose emails without digital assistance.How to Turn Off Predictive Text in Outlook on a MacMac users can also install Microsoft 365, as it has been perfectly ported to macOS. While the primary functions are the same, the menus and options are sometimes labeled differently. Therefore, you can't follow the exact steps you saw above for the Windows client.On Mac, you can see that the predictive text functions as the client Windows, accepting or rejecting the suggestions you see fit.These are the steps to disable the feature for Mac users:Launch Outlook on your Mac.Click on "Preferences."Go to "Autocorrect."Select "Text Completion."Uncheck the box that says "Show Text Predictions While Typing."Test and see if the feature has gone away.The advantage of the Mac client is you don't have to start a new email to turn the predictive text off the way you do on Windows.How to Turn Off Predictive Text in Outlook Web VersionThe web version of Microsoft Outlook has different controls than its desktop counterpart, but you can use it on any computer.Like the Mac client, the web-based Outlook version doesn't require a user to be in the middle of composing an email. They only have to locate the settings menu and look for the relevant sections.Follow these steps to turn off predictive text on the web version of Outlook:Go to the Microsoft Outlook page.Sign in if needed.Pick "Settings" from the top of the page.Go to "View All Outlook Settings."Select "Mail."Click "Compose And Reply."Uncheck the "Suggest Words Or Phrases As I Type" box under the "Text Predictions" section.Type and see if Outlook is still offering suggestions.Once you disable the word or phrase suggestion setting, you shouldn't see any words pop up on the screen anymore.How to Turn Off Predictive Text in Outlook on an iPhoneIf you prefer sending emails to others on the go, you can download Microsoft Outlook for the iPhone. It's available for free from the App Store. While not as full-featured as the PC versions, the mobile app has everything you need to communicate.In the case of mobile users, they swipe right to accept a suggestion. Continuing typing won't select the predictive text, but the software will still suggest words and phrases.Like on PC, by default, predictive text is enabled for Outlook when you install it. Thus, you must turn it off by going to the settings.Here are the steps for iPhone users:Open the Outlook app on your iPhone.Go to "Account Settings."Toggle "Text Predictions" off. It's below "Suggested Replies" and above "Report Messages."It only takes a few taps on an iPhone to enable and disable the feature, making it quite convenient.How to Turn Off Predictive Text in Outlook on an Android DeviceUnlike Outlook for all other platforms, the Android version didn't come with predictive text, which means those who wanted its advantages had to rely on their phone keyboard. However, that changed in February 2021, when the feature was finally implemented for all platforms.Nowadays, all users who like predictive text on Outlook for Android can enjoy its advantages. For those who aren't fans, however, they'll have to turn it off.Here's how you can do that on Android devices:Launch the Outlook app on your Android device.Tap on "Account Settings."Select "Text Predictions" to turn off the feature.Now, the feature should be disabled. It's that simple even on Android, as the app isn't too different than the version on iOS.Turning Off Other Predictive Text FunctionsWhile you can disable Outlook's predictive text feature, this won't turn off your keyboard's version of predictive text. When typing out an email on mobile, keyboards with this feature switched on will still suggest words.You can easily navigate to your keyboard's menus and turn off autocorrect and other functions if you wish.Outlook's machine learning word or phrase suggestion function won't work outside it. Thus, if you're worried about the AI recording your words outside of Outlook, those fears are unfounded.I'll Write This Email MyselfSome Outlook users prefer writing emails without digital assistance, which leads them to turn off any writing aids. Outlook also has other similar functions you can turn off, but most people find the features useful and choose to keep them on.Do you use Outlook's predictive text feature for writing your emails? What do you think about machine learning being used this way? Please tell us what you think in the comments section below.
